S&P COMPLETES REMARKABLE TRANSFORMATION OF JACKSON BARRACKS

Successful Historical Renovation Fully Restores Buildings 2-6, Modern Upgrades Added

NEW ORLEANS, LA (April 4, 2011) – Satterfield & Pontikes Construction Group, L.L.C. (S&P) of Kenner recently completed extensive renovations to upgrade historic garrison structures at Jackson Barracks in New Orleans. S&P served as the general contractor for the $7.3 million project that brought five of the two-story structures back to life.

S&P restored the wood-framed and masonry buildings for The State of Louisiana Division of Administration, Facility Planning and Control according to strict historical renovation guidelines. Yeates & Yeates Architects of New Orleans provided design and architectural services for the 17,785-square-foot project that required extreme care and meticulous craftsmanship to restore the buildings to their former beauty and prominence.

Every building on the military post received extensive flood damage caused by a levee breach as a result of Hurricane Katrina. S&P fully restored all the architectural finishes and features, which include wood flooring and trim, plaster, and existing brick. The original exterior look of brick with white columns also was restored.

Upgrades to the facilities include high-end wood cabinets, modern kitchen appliances, recessed lighting, granite countertops, and antique granite/slate-finished fireplaces. The barracks will serve as housing for enlisted soldiers.

Jackson Barracks, built in 1835, serves as headquarters for the Louisiana National Guard. The number of buildings that have survived since 1835 together comprise the largest single collection of antebellum structures at any location in the U.S.
