SATTERFIELD & PONTIKES WINS AWARDS FOR OUTSTANDING CONSTRUCTION IN LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS (October 6, 2010) – Satterfield & Pontikes Construction Group, LLC (S&P) in Kenner won four awards in South Central Construction’s Best of 2010 competition that recognizes commercial construction and design excellence for projects in Louisiana. S&P projects received awards for outstanding construction for the National World War II Museum expansion, L.B. Landry High School, and Marathon Oil Corporation’s administration building.

The National World War II Museum expansion project won the Judges Award for the Best Overall Project from all entries in all categories for design. The new museum building in downtown New Orleans is a unique mix of diverse geometric shapes, multiple angles, leaning walls, and innovative uses of materials.

S&P’s work on the National World War II Museum, which is a Smithsonian Affiliate, also won the Best in Category award for Best Cultural Project. Featuring the Solomon Victory Theater, American Sector Restaurant and Stage Door Canteen, the building is quickly becoming one of New Orleans’ top cultural attractions.

L.B. Landry High School was selected as Best in Category winner from all Best Green Building entries. S&P constructed the new school to achieve the U.S. Green Building Council’s Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Silver certification. The new 214,000-square-foot school in New Orleans’ Algiers neighborhood is a groundbreaking achievement in building materials sustainability, wise use of natural resources, and energy efficiency.

S&P received an Award of Merit for construction of the Marathon Oil Corporation administration building in Garyville. The new building is an elegant office complex complementing the newest, most advanced refinery in the U.S. The two-story building provides spacious, modern facilities for Marathon’s administrative staff and serves as the refinery’s Emergency Operations Center.
